THE MINOTAUR

The Story

In the Ancient Greek story there was a half-man half-bull called the Minotaur. It lived on the island of Crete at the palace of Knossos. These pictures were taken in Crete whilst we were on holiday.

In the story the city Athens they sent boys and girls to Knossos to be eaten by the Minotaur. Theseus defeated it by going into the maze with yarn. He unrolled the yarn on his way, killed the monster and rescued the rest by following the yarn.

What the Story was Really About

This story is a myth. What it's really about is Athens being the strongest now instead than Crete.

We visited a museum in Heraklion, Crete when we were on holiday – these statues are of the God Zeus and Goddess Hera and the 3-headed dog, Cerberus. Below is a picture of me and the Cretan Sea, part of the Aegean Sea. Also, here is my model of the Palace of Knossos!
