

The Toys Adventure

It was one ordinary day for Harry during lockdown. He couldn't go to school because there was a nasty virus called the Coronavirus. Instead he had played with his little sister Molly. They played with the blue, shiny train in his bedroom and they also had a football match in the garden but Molly wasn't very good. That night, Harry climbed into his comfy bed, pulled up the covers and went to sleep. But this wasn't any ordinary night...as soon as Harry closed his eyes the toys began to stir. They were alive!
